Alien Chatter releases "Invasion"

Los Angeles, CA – October 23, 2007

Alien Chatter has returned with their sophomore release entitled "Invasion". The new CD finds the duo of percussionist Satnam Ramgotra and keyboardist Rodney Lee delving deeper into their unique spin on Indo-Jazz that they now call "Indo-Jazztronica".

Furthermore, on this recording a few earthlings have joined Alien Chatter on their cosmic explorations. Perhaps one of the most recorded guitarists of our time, Michael Landau, is featured on a few tracks. Additional guests include Shri Alope DasGupta on Sitar, and Jimmy Mahlis on Oud. Bassists Shawn Davis, Rico Belled, and Stan Sargeant provide the low end.

"It is our 'Dark Side of the Moon'", says Rodney Lee. "Over the past few years, we poured everything we had into this recording, and we are extremely proud of the results. Listen for the unexpected...there are a lot of twists and turns in these compositions."

Ramgotra has played percussion and tabla with everyone from Beck to Sting to Niyaz and Cheb i Sabbah and has worked extensively on film and television music. Lee has played with Terence Trent D'Arby, Freddie Hubbard and Jody Watley among many others. He is equally at home in jazz, R&B, funk and pop. Together, these two veterans explore a unique territory that combines Indian music with jazz and electronica.
